Programs & Majors

OF THE

CONCORDIA UNIVERSITY SYSTEM

The forefathers of The Lutheran Church—Missouri Synod (LCMS) established schools for the education of their children before a sanctuary for worship was built. It was their intent that the youth be “wise, skilled and cultured people, well-informed and experienced in all matters, who are at the same time Christians, to whom one can entrust an important position, and from whom good advice can be obtained . . . who can be used by state and church, able to serve as officers of the congregation, secretaries, treasurers, justices, postmasters and representatives of the people in the legislature and the Congress, etc.” (paraphrase of Martin Luther).

The LCMS is strongly committed to Luther’s concept of vocation. Its colleges and universities are institutions in the tradition of liberal arts which provide Christ-centered education for men and women who will serve in a wide variety of professional occupations.

Lutheran education is marked by significant variables that are recognized and preserved to the present day. Lutheran education is built on the foundation of the Biblical message of salvation and framed and delivered according to the understanding and interpretation of the Confessions. Faculty members are members of Lutheran congregations and dedicated to the art of teaching. The faith and life ethics of the forefathers continues to be shared. Graduates of the Concordia University System are sought after because they will be good employees, individuals who care about those things that make for a meaningful life.

The major programs at the Concordias now exceed 150 undergraduate and 50 graduate. These programs serve the diversified interests of a large number of participants. Delivery systems vary from traditional face-to-face classroom settings, off campus sites, technologically delivered, etc., but always designed to meet personal needs whether for credit or non-credit.

Check out the possibilities! Consider a Concordia for an excellent academic program in the Lutheran tradition!
